

TRAINING SESSION IN AHWS

Education is moving at a crazy pace right now. Nobody wants to feel stuck in the past, and here at AHWS, we make sure our staff doesn't. We use a ton of daily tech—things like Bright Class, the 360 App, PRI Smart, and X-Wall. But instead of just throwing everyone into the deep end, we run totally casual, hands-on sessions. The main goal? Zero tech-induced headaches. We also bring in outside experts to pass along practical tips on AI tools and running a modern classroom.

But look, trying to keep pace with the curriculum? Yeah, that's barely half the battle. School life is incredibly exhausting—and honestly, teacher burnout hits hard. That's exactly why we pour a ton of energy into looking after everyone's mental and emotional health. We get regular breathing and mindfulness sessions going on campus—honestly, it's just a way to let the team step away from the desk, unwind a bit, and hit the reset button.

Besides, we just love throwing a bit of variety into the mix around here. Why stick strictly to standard training days? Our get-togethers dive into stuff you might not expect—like public speaking, building up your confidence, and even fun things like grooming, makeup tutorials, and life skills. It's basically just a great excuse for the team to learn something totally unrelated to lesson plans, share a laugh, and switch off.

When it comes down to it, we want AHWS to be a workplace where people actually look forward to showing up. A genuinely supportive space where you can grow as an individual—not just an employee.
